

SHEREE SHATSKY

Reflection

Is it fanciful to suppose the sky

burns steady even in the wildest night

so unnecessary, such a thing to believe the fabric through which the light must shine,

dangerous, perhaps,

to concentrate too much.

ABOUT THE POEM & AUTHOR

“Reflection” was created from Virginia Woolf’s Jacob’s Room (1922). About the poem and the process of composing it, Sheree Shatsky writes:

My process for found poems involves the discovery and repurpose of words and phrases connecting with my sense of word play. As a result, the musing of night sky magic emerges from the blackout of original text as the found poem “Reflection.”

Sheree Shatsky lives in Florida and can be found online at shereeshatsky.com. Her work has also appeared in Accidents of Light and Earth Hymn (KYSO Flash anthologies 2018 and 2019), Strange Encounters (Wordrunner eChapbooks 2015), Potato Soup Journal, Saw Palm, and elsewhere.
